Dear The Federal Communications Commission,

I do not want to pay more for my telephone service! I urge you to reject a flat fee proposal that would change how contributions are made to the Universal Service Fund. I am concerned that this proposal could make my current service unaffordable.

Under the flat fee proposal you are considering, people who make few long distance calls would pay the same as people or businesses that make many calls. In other words, low-volume and primarily residential customers would bear the same universal service fund burden as a high-volume residential or business customers. This is unfair!

I use my wireless phone for safety, security and convenience. I don't want to lose these benefits so that big businesses can pay less than their fair share. I urge you to reject the proposal to move the USF collection system to a flat-fee.

Keep the USF Fair!

Most Lower to Middle Class Americans can hardly afford the phone rates at this time, so hiking the tax and making the rates go up, just puts these people even farther from being able to afford them. Most likely would cause many to drop their phone services that they are depending on today. That would be detrimental to the already underprivileged Americans that are trying to survive the best they can. Higher utility rates of any kind will only cause these Americans to demand a higher wage, then the companies would either want more federal aid or go out of business (or bankrupt) and in turn would ultimately cost our government and in turn increase, the already out of sight, National deficit.

Sincerely,

Frank Abrams
